SLEEPWALKING

Sleepwalking or somnambulism, its technical name, is much more common and usually less important in children than in adults. The child or adult who moves about in his sleep is not actually and soundly asleep because he can hear and feel. This explains what is sometimes considered a miraculous ability to get about without suffering bodily harm. In the sleepwalking state, the individual is highly receptive to suggestion and can often be persuaded to return to bed, usually sleeping normally the remainder of the night. A child may walk in his sleep a few times for no apparent reason and then cease without there ever being a recognized cause. Parents seldom become alarmed over this and treat it as a joke. In some cases, a relatively simple cause may be found. For example, the child may be hungry and, in such instances, a light snack before bedtime may solve the problem. Sometimes mild pain or discomfort will produce the sleepwalking. It may be that the bed, mattress and covering are uncomfortable. Sometimes the motive behind the child's sleepwalking may be an unexpressed feeling of insecurity or a desire for more affection from the parents. Whether this is a factor in any given situation usually can be decided without difficulty and its correction should be just as easy. In severe cases, it is desirable to have the child examined thoroughly. The fact of sleepwalking should not be worried discussion with the child or in the child's presence, because this is likely to make him feel still more insecure. Sometimes a little analysis of the home situation by the parents will bring the answer. The only possible danger associated with waking a child that is walking in his sleep is that he may fall or otherwise injure himself. It does not cause any shock to the nervous system.

GLADES LIVESTOCK MARKET IS 'COUNTY FAIR' ON SALE DAYS

(PHOTOGRAPHED FOR GLADES OBSERVER BY ALLIE OKIE)

IN OFFICE, Paul Thompson, of Belle Glade, completes purchase of group of cattle as Thurmond Knight, Market Association secretary-treasurer looks on. Behind counter (l-r) are Mrs. George Geherty, Mrs. Leonard Brown, and Mrs. James Baldwin.

Market Young But Like Youth Is Still Growing

BY JANE RIEKER

There's a kind of "county fair" atmosphere out on the Belle Glade - Pahokee Road every Monday—the old-fashioned kind of county fair where livestock are a big attraction.

In the Glades, the week doesn't seem to begin officially until the Monday sale at the Glades Livestock Market is under way. There, in a strange mingling of cattlemen, cattlemen-farmers, buyers, sellers, and spare-time cattle fanciers, one of the biggest sales in the state is conducted each week.

Occasionally, on sale day, a Northern cattleman vacationing in Florida will wander into the market. Glades residents smile at each other when the Northern, perhaps used to the svelte dairy cattle of New York or the ponderous beef cattle of Nebraska or Virginia snorts at the ranginess of some of the cattle.

Local residents know well that the cattle business in the Glades has come a long way — and still has a long way to go.

Formed in '48 It is to the great credit of the Palm Beach County Cattlemen's Association, the Belle Glade Chamber of Commerce, and the C of C forerunners in Pahokee that back in 1948 the Glades Livestock Market Association was formed.

It was set up to establish a marketing facility which would ensure market prices being received for cattle at all times, to help Glades cattlemen pool their knowledge of cattle-raising for the greater gain of all, and to give them a chance to operate the business of cattle buying and selling in their own area.

It was Jose Moran who put up the money to build the market building which opened on May 12, 1950. First president of the Association was Roy Vandegrift, of Pahokee.

Sales Triple

From the first year of operation, with 13,740 head of cattle sold through the market, the sales have mounted higher and higher. In 1953 they were nearly triple those of the first year, with 37,560 head sold for a total in cash sales of $2,543,723.

On Feb. 1, 1952, the Association had progressed to the point where it purchased the market facilities.

The market and its equipment is now worth some $100,000. Total assets are around $150,000.

Major-domo of the thriving market is George C. Young, manager since the beginning of the market's operations.

A native of Cave City, Ky., Young attended Bowling Green Teachers College and the University of Miami. He was manager of the Bradenton Production Credit Association before coming to the Glades. In Bradenton, he owned and was active in the operation of a 1,200 acre ranch.

Young was first president of the Florida Association of Livestock Markets, and is a director of the Florida Council of Cooperatives, past director of the Glades Farm Bureau, past director of the Belle Glade Chamber of Commerce. He and Mrs. Young have two children, Jane, and George, Jr. Young teaches a Bible class at Belle Glade Church of Christ, and is active in civic life.

Officers of the Livestock Market Association include John L. Evans, Bean City, president; Leonard Pearce, Belle Glade, vice president; Thurmond Knight, Pahokee, secretary-treasurer. Board members in addition to the officers are Roy Vandegrift, E. M. VanLandingham, Fritz Stein, and Frank Wilson.

of the market, and Mrs. Odom is the bookkeeper.

Augmented Staff

Each sale day the bookkeeping staff is augmented by four efficient aides, who help process the sales records, handle the buying and selling funds. The sales office reaches its peak flurry as the sale draws to an end and cattlemen arrive to settle their transactions of the day.

Last Monday, for instance, 653 cattle were sold at the market at a total price of $42,327.72. Next Monday may be a bigger day, or it may be a smaller. It will be thriving, for sure.

Working always toward improving the quality of Glades cattle, the market is constantly importing good quality cattle for sale to local members who have an eye toward improving their herds.

Next week, for instance, Manager Young has announced that registered Angus heifers, yearling bulls, and two Santa-Ge-trudis bulls will be sold at the market, as well as a dozen Charbray and Charolaise-Hereford bulls.

As the months go by, the market's facilities are improved, with the expediting of cattle handling always foremost in the planning. Buyers, who sit in a special section dead center before the arena, may stroll the line along the multiple pens, or watch the cattle being unloaded, or get an early look at the groups to be offered for sale from the catwalks running through the barn.

On sale day, with the yard jammed with trucks and cars, the market teems with cattlemen — experts and dabblers as well — standing in corners comparing notes, or thoughtfully waiting for just the "right" buy. There are ample facilities for interested spectators even if they don't own the first heifer.

That's where that county fair atmosphere comes in — the old-fashioned kind, with never a pitchman or a dancing girl.

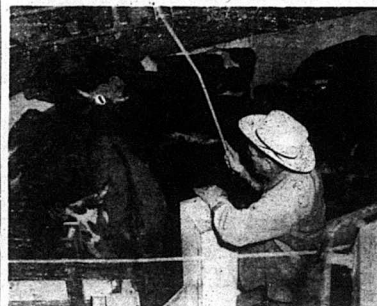

The market is strictly business — and the Glades can be proud that it is good business.

CORNER CONVERSATION by (l-r) M. J. Sapp, Doug Odom, Frits Stein.

AUCTIONEER'S BOOTH overlooks arena. Auctioneer is R. D. Cooper, Sarasota. Ring clerk is Mrs. Johnnie Davis, Pahokee.

MANAGER GEORGE C. YOUNG is at ringside for group sale.

RING MAN is Bill Stewart, or Arcadia, expert persuader.
